Treatment .....	1-18
Conclusion.....	1-19

Chapter 2: Attention Deficit Hyperactivity Disorder, Catecholamines, and the “Default Mode” of Brain Function: A Reassessment of the Dopaminergic Hypothesis of ADHD

by Francisco Aboitiz, Ph.D. and F. Xavier Castellanos, M.D.

Introduction .....	2-1
Catecholaminergic Signaling .....	2-2
Modes of Dopaminergic Signaling and Goal-Directed Behavior.....	2-4
Dopaminergic Signaling and ADHD Symptomatology.....	2-5
Norepinephrine and Other Neurotransmitters .....	2-7
Action of Stimulants (and Nonstimulants).....	2-7
The “Default Mode” Network and ADHD .....	2-9
Does Impairment in “Default Mode” Regulation Relate to Alterations in Catecholaminergic Signaling?.....	2-12
Conclusion.....	2-13

PART 2: ASSESSMENT ISSUES AND TECHNIQUES

Chapter 3: Assessment of Attention Deficit Hyperactivity Disorder in Young Children

by Steve S. Lee, Ph.D. and Kathryn L. Humphreys, M.A., Ed.M.

Introduction .....	3-2
Phenomenology and Terminology .....	3-3
ADHD Subtypes .....	3-4
Comorbid Oppositionality and Aggression .....	3-4
Epidemiology .....	3-5
Age of Onset .....	3-5
Prevalence .....	3-5

Chapter 6: Neuropsychology of Attention Deficit Hyperactivity Disorder: Implications for Assessment and Treatment

by Erik G. Willcutt, Ph.D. and L. Cinnamon Bidwell, Ph.D.

Introduction.....	6-2
Understanding the Neuropsychology of ADHD .....	6-2
Competing Neuropsychological Models of ADHD.....	6-3
Criteria 1 and 2: ADHD Group Deficits on Neuropsychological Measures Using Meta-Analysis to Summarize the Neuropsychological Literature on ADHD .....	6-3
Executive Functions.....	6-4
Motivational Dysfunction .....	6-6
Delay Aversion Model.....	6-6
Response Variability Model .....	6-7
Processing Speed Model .....	6-7
Conclusions Regarding Criteria 1 and 2 for a Primary Neuropsychological Deficit .....	6-8
Criteria 3 and 4: Sensitivity and Specificity of Neuropsychological Weaknesses to ADHD.....	6-8
Sensitivity.....	6-8
Specificity to ADHD .....	6-9
Potential Explanations for the Absence of a Single Primary Deficit in ADHD .....	6-10
Measurement Weaknesses .....	6-10
Diagnostic Heterogeneity .....	6-11
DSM-IV Symptom Dimensions.....	6-11
DSM-IV Subtypes.....	6-13
Conclusions Regarding Single-Deficit Neuropsychological Models of ADHD .....	6-13

Implications for Clinical Assessment and Treatment . . . . .	6-15
Screening for Individuals at Risk for ADHD . . . . .	6-16
Identification of Targets for Intervention . . . . .	6-16
Physiological Mechanisms of Medication . . . . .	6-16
Future Directions . . . . .	6-17
Prediction of Later Developmental Outcomes . . . . .	6-17
Multidisciplinary Studies . . . . .	6-17
Etiologically Informative Designs and Endophenotypes . . . . .	6-17
Brain Imaging . . . . .	6-17
Conclusion . . . . .	6-18

Chapter 7: Assessing Treatment Response

by Arthur D. Anastopoulos, Ph.D. and Terri L. Shelton, Ph.D.

Introduction . . . . .	7-2
ADHD Overview . . . . .	7-2
Situational Variability . . . . .	7-3
Psychosocial Difficulties . . . . .	7-3
Comorbidity . . . . .	7-3
Clinical Presentations . . . . .	7-4
Eight-Step Outcome Evaluation Process . . . . .	7-4
Step 1—Determining Outcomes . . . . .	7-6
Intervention Target . . . . .	7-6
Behaviors to Target for Treatment . . . . .	7-6
Symptoms Versus Functional Impairments . . . . .	7-7
Treatment of Comorbid Conditions . . . . .	7-7
Treatment Response . . . . .	7-7
Outcome Indicators . . . . .	7-8
Step 2—Determining Criteria for Success . . . . .	7-8
Intervention Criteria . . . . .	7-9
Meaningful Change . . . . .	7-9
Intervention Success . . . . .	7-10
Step 3—Selecting Methods of Evaluation . . . . .	7-10
Outcome Indicators . . . . .	7-10
Evaluation Process . . . . .	7-11
Timing Considerations . . . . .	7-11
Multimethod Approach . . . . .	7-11
Step 4—Collecting Baseline Data . . . . .	7-12
Step 5—Determining the Integrity of the Intervention . . . . .	7-12
Intervention Integrity Checklist . . . . .	7-13
Improvement Assessment . . . . .	7-14
Step 6—Measuring Outcomes . . . . .	7-15
Data Collection . . . . .	7-15
Treatment Evaluation . . . . .	7-15
Outcome Evaluation . . . . .	7-15
Step 7—Determining Efficacy of Treatment and Costs/Benefits Analysis . . . . .	7-16

Treatment Side Effects . . . . .	7-16
School-Based Interventions . . . . .	7-16
Step 8—Continuing, Modifying, or Replacing Treatment. . . . .	7-17
Conclusion. . . . .	7-17

PART 3: TREATMENT APPROACHES

Chapter 8: Pharmacological Interventions for Individuals With Attention Deficit Hyperactivity Disorder

by Mark L. Wolraich, M.D.

Introduction . . . . .	8-2
Dextroamphetamine . . . . .	8-2
Methylphenidate . . . . .	8-3
Stimulant Preparations . . . . .	8-3
Young Children . . . . .	8-4
Adolescents . . . . .	8-4

Methylphenidate. . . . .	8-5
Abuse and Diversion . . . . .	8-6
Drug Interactions . . . . .	8-6
Long-Term Effects. . . . .	8-6
Sudden Cardiac Death . . . . .	8-7
Amphetamines . . . . .	8-7
Combined Treatments . . . . .	8-8
Nonstimulant FDA Approved Medications for ADHD. . . . .	8-10
Atomoxetine. . . . .	8-10
Alpha Adrenergic Agents. . . . .	8-10
Cost. . . . .	8-11
Medications Used Clinically for ADHD But Not FDA Approved . . . . .	8-11
Tricyclic Antidepressants. . . . .	8-13
Bupropion . . . . .	8-14
Modafanil . . . . .	8-14
Conclusion. . . . .	8-14

Chapter 9: Psychosocial Treatments for Preschoolers At-Risk for Attention Deficit Hyperactivity Disorder

by Amanda P. Williford, Ph.D. and Terri L. Shelton, Ph.D.

Introduction . . . . .	9-2
Parent-Focused Interventions . . . . .	9-3
Features . . . . .	9-4
Parent-Child Relationship . . . . .	9-4
